Parkway Construction was founded in 1981 by John Elmer, whose vision was for the firm to become the “Customer’s Choice” by ensuring precise building techniques and processes performed by skilled people. From an initial focus on restaurant construction, Parkway has expanded into many other market sectors, including retail, entertainment, healthcare, hospitality, golf clubhouses, amenity centers, religious facilities, and more. Now, the firm is licensed to operate in all 49 states and continues to deliver on Elmer’s original vision for Parkway Construction.

With its in-house architecture and construction project management, Parkway has the expertise to handle all aspects of a project. As a testament to Parkway’s extensive experience and expertise, the firm was selected to build multiple locations for the casual dining, multi-unit restaurant concept, Lazy Dog. Lazy Dog restaurants are designed to look and feel like a Rocky Mountain ski lodge, with heavy timber framing, stone fireplaces, and a warm, hospitable atmosphere. These 10,000-square-foot ground up projects include a spacious dining room, full-size kitchen, a large bar, and a patio.
